

Monetary Policy according to HANK

Greg Kaplan

Princeton University
Economics Department

Ben Moll

Princeton University
Economics Department

Gianluca Violante

New York University
Economics Department

DESCRIPTION:

We study the effects of various monetary policy instruments (conventional, unconventional, forward guidance) on the macroeconomy within a novel framework that combines a rich modeling of household consumption and saving (into liquid and illiquid assets) decisions with a New-Keynesian production structure featuring nominal price rigidities.